SAIPAN USED AS BASE FOR RAIDING FORCE

Attack by B-29s Carried Out By New 21st Bomber Command

(By Associated Press)

TWENTY-FIRST BOMBER COMMAND, Saipan, Nov. 24—A mighty armada of B-29 Superfortresses blasted Tokyo today with hundreds of tons of bombs, opening what Gen. H. H. Arnold said was "an attack which will be carried on relentlessly from the air until the day of land-sea invasion" of Japan's home islands.

An undisclosed number of Superforts roared from newly-completed airbases here at dawn for the 3,000 mile flight which marked the initial attack on Japan's capital by land-based planes and its first bombing since April, 1942.

Brig Gen Emmett "Rosie" O'Donnell of Jamaica, N. Y., 38-year-old former West Point football coach, led the historic daylight assault, believed to be the largest attack yet made on Japan's homeland.

The aerial task force was from the recently-established 21st Bomber command of the 20th Army Air Force operating from the Marianas, under the command of Brig Gen. Hayward S. "Possum" Hansell, Jr., of San Antonio, Tex.

Two-Way Aerial Squeeze

The first use of these bases south and east of Tokyo creates a two-way aerial squeeze against Japan's vital industries, with other B-29s from China, to the westward.

First official announcement of today's raid merely said a "sizeable task force" of superforts "attacked industrial targets in Tokyo," another communiqué was promised when further details were available.

Tokyo, acknowledging the assault four hours after its announcement in the United States, said 70 Superforts hit the southern and northern outskirts of the capital early this afternoon, Japanese time. The broadcast, heard by the federal Communications commission, claimed the B-29s "failed to attain any tangible results" but "presidential sources, including one hospital, were slightly damaged." It said three were shot down. There was no Allied confirmation.

Tokyo's great sprawling industrial area, rimmed by airfields and anti-aircraft defenses, recent lone B-29 reconnaissance flights showed shipping and shipbuilding yards are located in nearby Yokohama.

Early reports gave no indication of the bomb loads carried. The airmen were briefed to avoid the Imperial palace, in the capital's heart, and shrines and temples.

They departed from here well aware that the raid would not be a surprise to the Japanese, long forewarned by reconnaissance flights and practice B-29 bombing missions against Truk and the Bonin Islands. The flight bore little resemblance to the first thrust of 16 medium bombers, launched from a carrier which hit Tokyo in 1942 under Lt. Col. (now Lt. Gen.) James Doolittle.

Telephone operators who had quit their jobs in 29 Ohio cities, Washington and Detroit went back to their switchboards. Similar walkouts, which had shown every sign of developing in New York and elsewhere, faded.

It will be up to the War Labor board now to adjust differences between the ex-strikers, their employers and their expressed targets—operators brought in from outside and given living expense bonuses not received by residents.

Up until late yesterday leaders of the union, the National Telephone Workers Federation (independent), had rebuffed the WLB. Then, in the face of prospects for government operation of the telephone companies, they called the whole thing off.

Backing the WLB also were such

The communique recorded by the Federal Communications commission in a Tokyo broadcast, said he B-29s raided Tokyo for about two hours, starting at 12:20 p.m.

FCC said all Tokyo radios appeared to have been broadcasting as usual at the time of the air raid.

Tokyo said the Superforts flying in "ten-odd groups, each comprising several bombers" unloaded bombs and incendiaries on the southern and northern outskirts of Tokyo early this afternoon, Japanese time.

Residential sections, including one hospital, were slightly damaged. The propaganda broadcast said. It added there was "no fire" against which Tokyo has taken elaborate precautions.

"Several enemy planes also appeared over central Japan," the broadcast said, "but fled without causing any damage."

Enemy Offered No Fighter Opposition, General O'Donnell Says

(By Associated Press)

TWENTY-FIRST U. S. BOMBER COMMAND, Saipan, Nov. 24—The American Superfortress raid on Tokyo today apparently took the Japanese by surprise, said Brig. Gen. Emmett "Rosie" O'Donnell to-night.

In Washington, President Roosevelt told Congress that lend-lease and reverse lend-lease should end with the close of the European and Pacific wars.

In a breakdown which covered items ranging from 186,832 bobby pins to aircraft and port facilities, the British white paper called the UNITED KINGDOM'S contributions "no small achievement" in view of the requirements of its own forces.

The British white paper showed total British contributions amounting to approximately $4,318,592,000, and reported that, during the year, July 1, 1943, to June, 1944, the United States received from Britain goods and services worth $2,437,062,000 received $44,532,000 and Turkey $82,724,000. Both neutral countries have treated with Britain.

In Washington, President Roosevelt told Congress that lend-lease and reverse lend-lease are not two sides of a financial transaction. We are not loaning money under lend-lease. We are not receiving payments on account under reverse lend-lease."

"Instead," he maintained, "the lend-lease system is a system of combined war supply, whose sole purpose is to make the most effective use against the enemy of the combined resources of the United Nations, regardless of the origin of the supplies or which of us uses them against the enemy."

The same theme was emphasized in the British report.

"This system under which the goods and services flow freely where they are most required for the common war effort," the British white paper said, "has been a vital factor in the achievements of the United Nations in the fields."

It stressed, too, that many of the supplies called for by the United States forces required "special production programs which involved the diversion of labor and resources from other war work of urgent importance."

A dinner meeting of the Manufacturers association will be held at 6:15 p. m. Monday in the Lape hotel for consideration of the plans of the Committee for Economic Development.

Will We Have Inflation?

Inflation, like Americanism, is a lot of little things. When they are added up, they amount to an enormous thing.

One of the little things is the tendency of human nature to get what is made most desirable by the fact it happens to be scarce. It is, further, the tendency of human nature to fail to see what human nature is leading to in this respect until it is too late.

Thus, in China, which now is in the throes of runaway inflation, no one would have thought at the beginning of paying $100 for a meal, which is what a meal may cost now, because at the beginning the meal didn't cost $100. It reached that absurd price by slow degrees—by the age-old process of charging all the traffic would bear.

Inflation, as everybody knows now, is caused by a combination of too much buying power and not enough things to buy. The United States has been lucky because it went into the war with more things available for purchase than any other country on earth; they cushioned the impact of industry's conversion to war production. The United States is still lucky because it has been able to produce more than enough essential food and because it has retained, out of commodities in existence plus a trickle of new articles, enough things to buy to absorb the greater part of its war boom income.

But the United States can't expect luck alone to pull it through the most expensive and wasteful war in history without inflation. The test will depend in the last analysis on the degree of self-discipline attained by its people. If they insist on spending money recklessly and foolishly in a sellers' market, bidding up prices on scarce articles simply because the buying power is available, there will be inflation. It will follow as inevitably as night follows day.

This is not economic theory, but economic fact. It is the answer to the question: Will we have inflation? It is the reason why every penny of buying power that cannot be used to sound advantage today should be diverted to War Bonds for use at some future day when enough commodities again are available to give the buyer a chance to get what he wants without competing with other buyers in their mutual advantage. America can have ruinous inflation or not, as its people choose.

Decisive Defeat For Germany

The confidence Gen. Eisenhower inspires with his straightforward talk about Allied strategy will help all of us to understand what the Allies now hope to accomplish in the Rhine valley.

Gen. Eisenhower says he expects the Germans to fight to the "bitter end" on the west side of the Rhine. Their decisive military defeat, he believes, will occur at that point, where their best defenses have committed them to a slowdown battle. The river at their back, with the Allies controlling the air, precludes the possibility of a withdrawal in strength to continue the battle east of the Rhine.

This conception of Allied strategy, stated clearly in a fashion that precludes popular misunderstanding, provides the answer to many doubts about the Allied policy of unconditional surrender. It means, simply, that Allied strategy aims to take the fullest possible advantage of German determination to fight to the last man by doing it just that way. The result, which Gen. Eisenhower views optimistically, will be a military defeat so overwhelming that every German will know it and do his future thinking accordingly.

Gen. Eisenhower knows victory on the Allied terms of unconditional surrender will be expensive, but he and his advisers have concluded that it is worth the price. Had German militarism been crushed in 1918 as completely as the Allies intend to crush it in 1944 and 1945, German dreams of renewed conquest after World War I might have been foisted. It now appears that in the weeks remaining in 1944, the military decision may be gained. The job remaining in 1945 may be an anti-climax—the mop-up after the decisive battle.

Gen. Eisenhower's frank statement of what the vast forces under his command are attempting to do removes all uncertainty. The great battle of the war in Europe on the western front is now in progress.

Common Enemies

William Green, president of AFL, appealing for a merger of labor union forces in his opening address to the organization's annual convention, said: "I hope the erring ones will return. If we stand as one, we can meet the common enemy on equal terms."

Who is union labor's common enemy? Certainly it is not management, because even in the most new dealish circles of the New Deal no one ever claims any more than production without management would be possible; the war opened a lot of eyes to that reality.

Nor is it ownership. The more enlightened spokesmen for organized labor and organized politics now have come around to the point of view that ownership is a kind of necessary evil, and some of them go a step further and admit that as long as somebody has to put up the money and take the risk of losing the equity, perhaps ownership also is entitled to a reasonable profit. There even are some progressive thinkers who are beginning to see that private ownership may be preferable to public ownership in the public utilities field—all of which tends to prove that thought on the subject didn't stop with the death of Karl Marx who was, after all, a product of a century in which none of the things he talked about had happened yet.

So Mr. Green's "common enemy," it must be assumed, is whatever force threatens the interests of organized labor. It might be politicians, for example. They ruined organized labor in Italy and Germany. It would be reassuring to believe that Mr. Green had politicians in his mind. It would show that Mr. Green was keeping abreast of current events.

Affairs of State

In the footnotes on the history of our times will appear a quotation from the prime minister of England, commenting on a famous occasion in a hard-fought presidential campaign in the United States. It was made public by the Rt. Rev. G. Ashton Oldman, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Albany, on his return from an official trip to England, where Mr. Churchill, who said he had seen newsreel pictures of President Roosevelt in a dour, told Rev. Ashton:

"Tell your President not to go out in the rain. I know what he'd say to me if I did it."

Without knowing what Mr. Churchill thinks Mr. Roosevelt would say, it's our guess it would be something like this: "That's a heck of a beating to give yourself, Mr. Prime Minister, to prove to your constituents that you can take it. If they don't know it by this time, they never will."

The Stars Say

For Saturday, November 25.

A PROPITIOUS day for advancing cherished ambitions by the employment of initiative, originality and talents. Concentrate all the ingenuity and brilliant ideas, supported by novel and enterprising tactics. There might be a discriminating use of the fine arts and creative vision, with charm and beauty figuring in constructive development. Boldness and originality may be prolific of real progress or unusual expression. Maintain peace and happiness in all affairs, social and affectional.

Those whose birthday it is have a promise of reaching important objectives by the use of originality, unique skills or creative forms in out of the orthodox or accustomed channels. Beauty, charm, romance and novelty in ideas are under dramatic stimuli, but this may not reach into domestic life, where emotions and erratic impulses may bring defeat. Swift and decisive grasp of openings should be profitable, but be alert to duplicity, intrigue and fraud. Few to the straight and narrow pathway.

A child born on this day may have novel and original talents and skills with keen ideas and judgment, although these may not pervade the domestic or affectional realm.

Hopeless Situation

Sweet are the uses of adversity, thinks the Anti-Smoking Alliance, which has hailed the current smokes shortage as "a golden opportunity" for millions of smokers to quit the nasty habit.

The Alliance not only offers opportunity, but a rather complicated cure which involves a change of diet, doses of Rochelle salts and cream of tartar, Turkish baths and the chewing of gentian root or camomile blossoms whenever the urge to smoke becomes too overpowering.

Somehow we view the Alliance's golden opportunity with scant hope. Even if all smokers took advantage of it, in a few months the air would be full of hawks of millions who had to wait in line two hours for a Turkish bath. And the black market in gentian and camomile would be flourishing.

Wouldn't it be great if all the grouchies were as bad off as they think they are?

It has been a great year for football stadiums to be filled to capacity—not to mention some of the spectators.

Store windows are dressed now to keep the home buyers yearning.

A fine wartime motto: keep your mind on your work but not your work on your mind.

One of the main moves for peace will be to talk the Japs and German's arms off—for all time to come.

Nor is ownership. The more enlightened spokesmen for organized labor and organized politics now have come around to the point of view that ownership is a kind of necessary evil, and some of them go a step further and admit that as long as somebody has to put up the money and take the risk of losing the equity, perhaps ownership also is entitled to a reasonable profit. There even are some progressive thinkers who are beginning to see that private ownership may be preferable to public ownership in the public utilities field—all of which tends to prove that thought on the subject didn't stop with the death of Karl Marx who was after all, a product of a century in which none of the things he talked about had happened yet.

So Mr. Green's "common enemy," it must be assumed, is whatever force threatens the interests of organized labor. It might be politicians, for example. They ruined organized labor in Italy and Germany. It would be reassuring to believe that Mr. Green had politicians in his mind. It would show that Mr. Green was keeping abreast of current events.

Affairs of State

In the footnotes on the history of our times will appear a quotation from the prime minister of England, commenting on a famous occasion in a hard-fought presidential campaign in the United States. It was made public by the Rt. Rev. G. Ashton Oldman, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Albany, on his return from an official trip to England, where Mr. Churchill, who said he had seen newsreel pictures of President Roosevelt motoring in a downpour, told Rev. Ashton:

"Tell your President not to go out in the rain. I know what he'd say to me if I did it."

Without knowing what Mr. Churchill thinks Mr. Roosevelt would say, it's our guess it would be something like this: "That's a heck of a beating to give yourself, Mr. Prime Minister, to prove to your constituents that you can take it. If they don't know it by this time, they never will."

The Stars Say

For Saturday, November 25.

A PROPITIOUS day for advancing cherished ambitions by the employment of initiative, originality and talents. Concentrate all the ingenuity and brilliant ideas, supported by novel and enterprising tactics. There might be a discriminating use of the fine arts and creative vision, with charm and beauty figuring in constructive development. Boldness and originality may be prolific of real progress or unusual expression. Maintain peace and happiness in all affairs, social and affectional.

Those whose birthday it is have a promise of reaching important objectives by the use of originality, unique skills or creative forms in out of the orthodox or accustomed channels. Beauty, charm, romance and novelty in ideas are under dramatic stimuli, but this may not reach into domestic life, where emotions and erratic impulses may bring defeat. Swift and decisive grasp of openings should be profitable, but be alert to duplicity, intrigue and fraud. Few to the straight and narrow pathway.

A child born on this day may have novel and original talents and skills with keen ideas and judgment, although these may not pervade the domestic or affectional realm.

Hopeless Situation

Sweet are the labors of adversity, thinks the Anti-smoking Alliance, which has hailed the current smokes shortage as "a golden opportunity" for millions of smokers to quit the nasty habit.

The Alliance not only offers opportunity, but a rather complicated cure which involves a change of diet, doses of Rochelle salts and cream of tartar, Turkish baths, and the chewing of gentian root or camphor blossoms whenever the urge to smoke becomes too overpowering.

Somehow we view the Alliance's golden opportunity with scant hope. Even if all smokers took advantage of it, in a few months the air would be full of hovels of millions who had to wait in line two hours for a Turkish bath. And the black market in gentian and camphor would be flourishing.

Wouldn't it be great if all the gourmets were as bad off as they think they are?

It has been a great year for football stadiums to be filled to capacity—not to mention some of the spectators.

Store windows are dressed now to keep the home buyers yearning.

A fine wartime motto: keep your mind on your work but not your work on your mind.

One of the main moves for peace will be to talk the Japs and German's arms off—for all time to come.

THANKSGIVING

BATON ROUGE, La.—Twenty-four non-coms of the first three grades at Harding Field volunteered to go KP on Thanksgiving to give the lower four grades a rest. Lest the rigors of a full day prove too much for the unpracticed "rank," a number of additional volunteers were accepted to permit a two-shift deal giving everybody a half-day break.

HEN TALKED TURKEY

SWAN ISLAND, Me.—When a hen turkey's four youngsters grew too big to huddle comfortably beneath her wings on cold night, a warden reported, she "persuaded" a gobbler to roost by her side, regally to protect her little ones.

HEAD BEATS BULLETS

PORT MORESBY—Army bakers have taken their first prisoner. A Japanese captured at Toem, Dutch New Guinea, said the aroma from the U.S. Army quartermaster bakery was so overpowering that he had to give himself up.

MAKING THE BEST OF A BAD LOT

BOGOTA, Colombia.—The Bolivar government, which recruits its men with the income from the state distillery, is torn between profits and a desire to uplift its citizens. Therefore its advertisements say in large type: "VICE IS DEAD" and then continue: "But if you are accustomed to the use of liquor, choose that made by the State of Bolivar because it is hygienically produced. Prices within the range of the consumer."

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Eng.—Today is an unlucky day for 44-year-old Seaman Tommy Scragos. These things have happened to him since 1916—always on Friday: One ship he sailed on was sunk by mines; three went aground; three sailed with other ships, one with iceburg, and three were sunk by torpedo.

Can Divide Hospital Unit Into 36 Packs

CLEVELAND—For the first time since its inception in the mind of an anonymous Army surgeon—a relative of the man who devised the method of packing sardines—the public has been allowed to see the portable hospital unit which is saving the lives of 97 out of 100 battle casualties.

The unit, on display at the recent American Hospital Assn. convention here, can be sub-divided into 36 50-to-70-pound packs for moving and can be carried on the backs of surgeons and doctors over any jungle trail impassable to mules or mules.

Not all of the unit was on display, but even so, it had never been exhibited to such an extent. The unit can be set up within 400 yards of battle lines and can care for as many as 40 casualties at a time.

Equipment includes surgical instruments delicate enough to perform brain and nerve operations, enough medicine to doctor a battalion of men for a week, mess equipment, generators, hospital carts and linens, and insecticides.

The Cleveland exhibit also displayed eight-inch insect bombs, guaranteed to kill every insect within 2,500-square-foot range. Samples of DDT, sprayed by plane, deadly-efficient DDT can clean up insect-infested areas in half an hour areas which formerly would have taken 200 men one month to disinfect.

Incidentally, DDT, which is not available to the American public, is known as "sleeping powder" to thousands of Egyptians and Indians because for the first time they are able to sleep comfortably without lice.

Lynch Negro After 2 Women Are Slain

KEVILLE, TENN., Nov. 24.—Within six hours after and less than 100 yards from where he admittedly lashed and battered two white women to death, James T. Seales, Negro-Negro trusty at a state reformatory near here, was shot to death yesterday by a number of men who removed him from the Pikeville jail.

Victim of the bloody slayings was Mrs. Charles M. McKinnie, 19, the mother. Mrs. H. E. Scott, 20, is superintendent of the institution, the state training and agricultural school for Negro boys. He was away at the time of the tragedy. Assistant Superintendent W. S. Nell and Storekeeper Virgil Davis recovered the bodies of the women and they went to the Scott home in the school grounds.

Seales was returned to the school by two farmers who took him into custody as a suspected escapee from the institution, without knowing of the slaying. Nell said the youth, 16, planned the attacks.

There will be a full investigation of both the murders and the lynching asserted State Highway Patrol Chief Lynn Bomar who took charge of Gov. Prentice Cooper.

The governor offered a reward of $500 for arrest and conviction of those guilty in this lynching.

Only persons who are teetotalers, nonsmokers and vegetarians were invited to settle in a new town just near Prague, Czechoslovakia, a few years ago.

Berlin Battered, But No Shambles, Reports Traveler Back in France; Food Not Scarce

BY TOM WOLF
NEA Staff Correspondent

PARIS—The G.I. who marches into Berlin and expects to find another St. Lo or Hamburg or Cassino—a horizontal monument to air power—is going to be disappointed.

A substantial portion of the city stands undamaged, its utilities continue to function fairly well, and some two million people continue to live there—if not in comfort, at least with their minimum daily needs amply supplied.

This is the picture of the German capital just brought to Paris by a man who was in Berlin only a few weeks ago and who undoubtedly is among the last dozen people who will reach France from Berlin for the rest of this war.

PATCHED UP

"By and large the new buildings of the capital—and most of the important Nazi headquarters are new—have stood up despite repeated bombings," he said. Hitler's Reichschancellery, for example, shows cracks and pittings in its massive walls. But it is standing and is probably all right inside. The same is true of Goebbels' propaganda ministry.

The center of the city has been badly damaged, continued this informant, who prefers to remain anonymous even to nationality and profession. The Tiergarten, Berlin's great central park which the Germans took such pains to cover with camouflage, looks like a battlefield. No one has bothered, or perhaps had the time, to pick up the bits of fallen airplanes, the bundles of Allied propaganda leaflets, the shredded bits of camouflage around the bases of the great flak towers which Herr Goering built in the park to reinforce his boast that Berlin could never be bombed.

The famous Brandenburg Gate at the eastern end of the Tiergarten is somehow miraculously untouched. Just a few yards away from it, on the sides of the Paris Square, the French and British embassies are completely destroyed.

Most of the buildings of the Wilhelmstrasse and Unter den Linden are damaged, with the exception of the newest and strongest. Many of them, however, have been patched up. The Hotel Adlon, headquarters of Nazi bigwigs, and of foreigners in Nazi favor, has been damaged. But it has been reinforced with a huge circle of concrete two yards thick at street level. To enter the hotel you have to go through what appears to be a huge fortress casemate.

TRANSPORTATION FAIR

The worst damage in the center of Berlin has been south of the Tiergarten in a shopping and residential district. In this area my informant says that he walked for fifteen minutes without seeing one house capable of being lived in.

JAPS DEFICIENT IN MALARIA WARFARE

So Declares Army Surgeon General Back from South Pacific Tour

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Brig. Gen. R. W. Bliss, assistant surgeon general of the Army, has returned from a tour of South Pacific battlefields with the conviction that there is absolutely no comparison between Japanese medical equipment and ours."

The Japanese apparently have no malarial control and consequently incidents of malaria are "very high" in the Japanese army, Bliss said.

American malarial control activities have been very effective, he added, and where once it was "almost impossible" to see because of mosquitoes and flies, now it is almost impossible to find a mosquito or fly."

Bliss attributed much of this success to the effectiveness of DDT powder, which is sprayed over large areas of the islands by plane. He revealed that in a test cage of flies and mosquitoes is left near the area being sprayed and that in an hour's time at least half of these are dead. All die less than 24 hours after the plane has passed.

Bliss also told the story of 143 British and Australians, all former prisoners of the Japanese. Aboard a Japanese prison ship, part of a convoy out of Singapore, they were torpedoed, picked up by an American submarine and taken to Saipan. Bliss met them when they arrived at the general hospital and quickly made apologies for the crude facilities. The men expressed amazement at the speed with which they had been hospitalized and cared for by American doctors and nurses and told Bliss that no apologies were needed.

"This is heaven," they said. While prisoners of the Japanese in Singapore, they said, they had "worked hard and been fed very little." All were suffering from tropical ulcers and exposure when they were picked up by the submarine.

Bliss disclosed that approximately 18,000 homeless and foodless civilian Japanese, Chamorras and Koreans are being cared for on Saipan where the Army has set up a 400-bed hospital.

Referring to the evacuation of American wounded from the islands Bliss said that this operation is "impressively efficient" and that between 80 and 100 wounded are flown to San Francisco each day.

Family Cars Won't Give Way To Airplanes Yet

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Do not expect to buy that small plane or helicopter as soon as the war ends. According to Dr. David J. Peery, of the aeronautical engineering department of Pennsylvania State College, reconversion from war to peace will take at least five years.

It will probably be ten years before most of your neighbors will replace the family bus with a private "roadable" airplane or helicopter. Many of these small planes will be capable of running on highways as well as in the air, and folding wings and landing gear designed for one-way landing strips along highways or in town may be added features, Dr. Peery states.

If you live in the east, Dr. Peery predicts that your choice will be a helicopter, because of its suitability for rough topography and population congestion. The postwar airplane however, should be more popular in the wide open country of the midwest and west.

The War Department will show restricted staff film reports—official Signal Corps combat films, banned from public view—to wounded veterans. These photographic "reports" show military operations on all fronts with complete explanatory remarks, but without editorial comment.

A refrigerator should not be placed close to the kitchen range, radiator or hot-air register, since heat from them is sure to make the motor operate more and wear faster.

TROOPS IN PARIS

High Cost of Everything
Curbs Play Spirit In French Capital

By TOM WOLF.
NEA Staff Correspondent
PARIS—Memo to Broadway: Paris hasn't got anything you haven't got more of. Only here it's twice as expensive.

Paris is still off limits to all troops except the relative handful stationed here, but if folks back home could get to Paris now and wanted to make an evening of it, here's what it would be like:

Cocktails before dinner would be no problem. There are literally hundreds of cafes open before dinner. You might not be able to go to one of the haunts you've heard about. Harry's New York Bar, for example, is shut because the proprietor went away for his annual August vacation and hasn't been able to get back to Paris since. There seems to be plenty of wine, brandy and champagne around, though bartenders tell you there's a serious shortage. This may account for the prices—which run from 75 cents to $1.50 per drink.

Dinner is an all but unsolvable problem. You'll have to eat at home and like it. Practically no restaurants are open evenings for lack of food. Some of the top pre-war places like Maxim's were notorious collaborators. As a result they're shut—probably permanently. Many of the best hotels like the Crillon have been requisitioned by the Army.

Dinner for Two: $20

The only restaurants open in the evening are in non-requisitioned hotels and these dining rooms are reserved for residents. If you know a resident, you may be able to wangle a table. Then you'll eat in gay surroundings and have flawless service. The only catch is that the food will be scanty and mediocre—and the bill won't be. Dinner for two, including one bottle of wine, will cost $20, minimum.

After dinner you can go to one of the half-dozen theaters currently open. There are a couple of amusing comedies and revues, but nothing with a large chorus. Most of the humor is topical, involving occupation hardships or current day shortages. Theaters have a tremendous lighting problem (since there's no electricity until 9:30). The solution to this problem is batteries and in some cases simply lighting the stage the same way you light any room—with ordinary light bulbs hung from the ceiling or walls.

After dinner or the theater the problem of where to go boils down to the question of transportation. Because the Metro shuts at 9:30 and because Paris is taxless, most Americans live close to the Champs Elysees and the Madeleine near the various Army headquarters. Therefore, few are venturing to Montparnasse and the Left Bank. It's a long walk home—and walk you must after 9:30 unless you can find a horse cab, which costs about $2 per mile. Anyway, there's very little open at Montparnasse.

Paris Blocked Out

That narrows your choice to a few pleasant spots along the Champs Elysees and all of Montmartre. The trick about Montmartre is arriving just before 9:30. When the Metro stops, the electricity goes on. Of course, electricity goes on inside only. There's a complete blackout outside—giving all of Paris a definitely unfestive atmosphere at night.

Most Montmartre spots which always attracted American tourists are closed at the moment—including such world famous show places as the Bal Tabarin, Moulin Rouge, and Folies Bergere. Most hope to reopen soon, but plans are fairly vague, largely because at present there's no way for chorus girls to get home after the show.

There are three or four cabarets open, but the demand for tables exceeds the supply and to get in you must either book in advance or know someone who knows someone. The shows themselves aren't very lavish, but the girls are lovely—as most Americans have found most Parisian women to be. Cabaret shows emphasize costumes which certainly save on clothing coupons and also make most soldiers' eyes pop.

There are a couple of dozen places to dance, most of them around the Rue Pigalle. They, too, are jammed—mostly by the French who are making up for four years of occupation during which dancing was illegal throughout France.

EMPHASIZE COMFORT IN POST-WAR HOME

CHICAGO—The pent-up demand for all kinds of construction in the postwar period will require more men than at any time in the history of the building industry and construction will be an important factor in alleviating unemployment, according to Henry J. Schwein, general manager of the gypsum association.

Safety and comfort rather than "startling innovations" will be emphasized in the postwar home, Schwein said.

"They'll have walls with more fire protection, insulation and vapor barriers to prevent condensation, all at little if any more cost than the prewar wall," he said.

"Refinement of new materials will make possible new handling of interiors. For just a little more the principal rooms can be sound-conditioned for restful quiet."

As soon as WPB permission is granted work can start on homes, apartment buildings, institutions and other buildings that have been planned, Schwein said, but he warned that the expected innovations will come later.

"All the talk about miracle devices has failed to make clear that they are still in the experimental stage," he said.

weapons as power to take away union security privileges, as one board source noted in citing a west coast dispute where a union lost its closed shop provision for disregarding WLB orders.

Hearing Concluded

Union leaders said they anticipated fair treatment in a peaceful settlement; they showed no signs of feeling they had lost in the contest to date.

A break in the situation, which began a week ago when operators left their jobs at Dayton, O., came shortly after WLB referred the entire problem to Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, a usual step before government seizure of strike-bound facilities.

Robert G. Pollock and Mrs. Mary E. Gannon, presidents respectively of the Ohio and Washington affiliates of the union, called for, and got, immediate termination of the strike.

"This action," Pollock's statement said, "was taken after full consideration of the position taken by the National War Labor board at the public hearing which concluded yesterday."

At that hearing WLB ruled out negotiations between the telephone company and strikers until the latter returned.

The dispute centered over living cost bonuses of $18.25 paid outside workers brought to Dayton and paid in addition to regular wages received by local employees. Washington operators and those elsewhere complained of similar payments to transfers, and also struck in sympathy.

One possibility for the operators is establishment of a special WLB panel for expeditious handling of disputes of telephone workers solely such as WLB's present lumber and shipbuilding commissions exclusively devoted to their specialties.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

An Old-Fashioned Drink

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I GATHER from gossip and letters and moving up and down and hither and yon in the world that Certainly whether the virtues of hot water are as advertised or not, nobody could ever say by the longest stretch of the imagination that it even did anybody any harm.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only and then only through his column.

the old-fashioned practice of drinking hot water is coming back into fashion.

One of my correspondents whom I quote this week wanted to know whether I thought drinking hot water with a little lemon in it in the morning was harmful to health. She had been told it was. This question puzzled me as much as if she had asked me whether breathing was harmful to health, but I found a day or two later an advertisement in a Los Angeles paper which advocated hot water and a few drops of lemon as a morning drink to start the day right. I suppose somebody is always ready to take the joy out of life by saying that whatever you like to do is bad for you, but when they said this one is unhealthy it is pretty near the limit.

Benefits of Hot Water

As to how much health giving qualities are derived from drinking hot water, at least it has good authority behind it. John Hunter, the greatest surgeon of his day in the world, was reported thus by his biographer—"Dr. Hunter was the subject of vertigo and suffered from pulses in his ears and insomnia. Nothing gave him relief till he took a tumblerful of hot water every night just before going to bed. This gave him a good night's rest. So impressed was he by this simple means that he frequently prescribed it for patients with irritable stomachs."

Again it is related by an eminent medical authority that two Englishmen took the journey across America before it was opened up by railways from east to west. Their only provision was hard biscuits and a spirit lamp to boil water. The hot water they used at first to soak the biscuits in, but they soon began to drink it and were astonished and pleased to find that it acted as a powerful stimulant and producer of strength.

The ordinary procedure used to drink a glass of hot water on rising, as soon and as regularly as the teeth are brushed. I can remember my father sitting down in his bedroom every morning in his nightgown and slowly drinking his glass of steaming water sip by sip. He claimed it regulated his bowels gave a man a chance to compose his thoughts for the day and got the mucus out of his stomach. I can only record that he lived in full possession of his faculties, his bowels and his stomach until the age of 78. Of course father sometimes had more mucus in his stomach than at other times, but—

Aid to Intestines
The addition of lemon juice adds a piquancy to the flavor of the hot water and allows you to drink more of it which undoubtedly starts the intestines into peristaltic action. The first soft drink ever to be introduced into America was lemonade, and I do not yet know of a better one. The claim that it adds Vitamin C and possibly B and A well founded for those who are conscious-stricken about their vitamins.

organs are not able to form the same. Hot water thus aids or supplements the chemical actions of the system. I have cases to show that this stimulating action of hot water is sufficient to bring the body out of the very lowest condition as to strength."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
T. B. G.—Is a rice diet good for high blood pressure?

Answer: Dr. Walter Kempner, of Duke University, has reported on a group of patients who on a diet of rice sweetened with fruit or fruit juices had a reduction in blood pressure in two-thirds of instances. I have had no experience with it. The doctor added, the diet would probably never be popular because it was so monotonous. It certainly wouldn't hurt anybody who wanted to try it.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. You Gotta Think Quick

It looked as if I'd outbluffed Boggio. He left me in peace, vanishing from my life as completely as if he'd never existed.

It had taken some time to get rid of the last lingering doubts, and for awhile I was jumpy each time the phone rang or when a stranger bumped into me on the street, and then that too disappeared. I breathed freely once more and began making plans for the future.

But such is the strangeness of destiny that often the people and events that play the greatest part in shaping it are precisely those you overlooked.

I had forgotten about Rugg, the miserable jerk whom I saved from the chair. Had my eloquence been less stirring and had I not obtained such a triumphant acquittal, he wouldn't have been alive then. And he wouldn't have made the belated discovery that a man cannot twice be tried for the same crime. He learned this in Detroit from where he was writing Boggio frequent requests for small sums of money which Boggio sent him, more because of the nuisance value of these letters than for their threat to his security.

Then the inevitable happened. Confident that he could not expose Boggio with no risk to himself, Rugg made an exorbitant demand. I never did learn the exact amount but it was staggering. The letter arrived on the day Ginger walked out, and I suppose the combination of these two unrelated events coming after my own gesture of defiance plunged Boggio into a rage that bordered on insanity.

When he came out of it something had happened. His spirit broken, he decided to throw in the sponge and finish his days abroad under an assumed identity. He would no longer live in constant fear of exposure, and furthermore he still had a large fortune soaked away outside the borders of the United States.

He therefore wrote a cunning letter to Rugg, indicating that he was raising the demanded sum, and asking for a few days of grace which Rugg magnanimously granted him. Then Boggio made a deal with Perez, leaving him large liquid holdings in exchange for a final undertaking.

That evening I went to fetch Mickey from work as usual. The bookstore where she was employed was located near Washington Square and I always got a kick out of approaching the place in such a manner that I'd see her through the window long before she saw me. Then I'd tap on the window and watch her face light up.

"Hi, Mickey."

"Hi, Leo!"

"Shake a leg there, honey. Papa can't wait all night."

"All right, darling. I'm coming as fast as I can."

She'd close the door, lock it, push it to see if it was secure and then we'd start down the street together, swinging hands like a couple of kids.

This time she was in unusually high spirits and I remembered that Don had just started on his new job in a downtown garage. I asked her how he liked it and she said it was fine. He'd called her up during the lunch hour to tell her about it.

We continued on down the block and stopped in front of the window of an antique dealer. He had several things that we'd mentally bought for our future home and we liked to look at them. Suddenly Mickey uttered a little sigh of disappointment.

"The end table's gone."

"Yes, Mickey, I guess it's sold."

"Now we'll have to pick out another."

"How about the one over there, by the mirror?"

"It isn't half as nice."

"There are lots of other places," I said. "In fact there's one around the corner. Let's go see."

We were turning away when there was a noise like a car back-firing, followed by a shattering of glass right near us. The shock was so sudden and so violent that for a moment all consciousness was suspended. Then I became aware of a burning in the left shoulder and Mickey grew heavy on my arm.

At the hospital they dressed my wound and told me how lucky I was. The bullet had only grazed me. Lucky! The irony of it!

I kept on asking for Mickey and they said the doctors were still examining her. They'd known in a little while. Then a couple of men came in. They were from the police and fired all sorts of questions at me. I told them what I could, but I guess I didn't make much sense because they said they'd speak to me later.

When they left, the same thoughts kept coming back, over and over again.

Dear God, I haven't asked you for anything since I was a kid. Maybe I haven't always believed in you, but if you're there listen to me. Make it a superficial wound like mine. Please, God! Those bullets weren't meant for her. It was all a mistake. God, Listen to me....

A nurse came in. I didn't even have to ask her. I could read it in her eyes and I became frantic. I pleaded with her as if it were in her power to work miracles. I yelled at her hysterically. What kind of a lousy hospital was this? Let them call in more doctors! Real doctors! Had they tried a blood transfusion? Yes, that was it! They could take all the blood from my body. Every drop of it. I'd sign a paper right away....

The nurse grabbed my arm. Her voice was sympathetic, but firm. "We've done all we can, Mr. Kabateck, but it's an internal hemorrhage. We've given her something for the pain and she's not suffering. She wants to see you now. Please bear up for her sake."

WISHES OF GI'S IN INDIA ARE LISTED

CALCUTTA — Approximately 50 hours of flying time spread over a month, a looping tour of the CBI theater from Kandy to Chungking and talks with hundreds of Americans, British, Chinese and Indians, brings the following conclusions:

1. Every last GI wishes the war would end right away. That goes for British, Indians and Chinese.

2. Every last GI wishes he could go somewhere else to fight—if he must keep on with the war. It is too hot, dirty and lonesome in India, too dirty and lonesome in China. It can't be said for sure what the British, Chinese and Indians think about going somewhere else.

3. Every last GI believes that nobody else is fighting the war very hard except the Americans. It is fairly clear that the British, Chinese and Indians think the same thing.

4. Every last GI wishes that he could get someplace else to fight—if he must keep on with the war. It is too hot, dirty and lonesome in India, too dirty and lonesome in China. It can't be said for sure what the British, Chinese and Indians think about going somewhere else.

Among the Fantastic Plans Was One for Railroad to Transport U. S. Fleet

WASHINGTON—The letter, addressed simply to "Boss of the Guns, Navy Department," caused quite a stir when it was opened by the Office of Inventions here.

"My dear is swell," the Navy's correspondent began. "You attach a big net, a great big one, to a couple of torpedoes you aim em at a big battleboat."

"They run after she and catch up. Then the propella gets caught in the net and busts."

"I hope you use my swell idea as I thaw it on a hulluva long spell. For freedom, liberty and our good old U. S. A."

"A Patriotic Citizen." The self-propelled submarine trap was only one of the thousands of suggestions which have been received by the office since Pearl Harbor. Lt. J. G. R. E. McCord discloses in an article in "Shipmate," publication of the United States Naval Academy Alumni association.

One man appeared in person with a contrivance resembling a modified mousetrap. He solemnly rolled a steel ball toward it. The trap engulfed the ball and tossed it back toward the inventor, who explained that a bigger model lowered over the side of a warship would snap up approaching enemy torpedoes and lob them back to the source.

Railroads For Fleet

The fellow who thought up a flying submarine with a 300 to 400 foot wingspread hardly went as far as another patriot who conceived the idea of a submersible aircraft carrier with space for a hundred planes.

Some of the volunteer advisers were concerned over the possibility that the Panama canal might be bombed out of commission. They suggested that special railroads be constructed to move our fleet from one ocean to another.

"Several were minor league affairs, designed only to operate across the isthmus or through Costa Rica," McCord reported.

"One, however, about 150 feet wide, with three rails, was set up for operation directly across continental United States. A huge dry dock would be submerged at the Atlantic end, the ships would slip in, and then the dock would be hauled across the continent on the "One such railroad was designed to haul the fleet over land at a speed of 20 miles per hour, using a locomotive which would generate 10,000 horsepower."

The lieutenant stressed that not all the ideas fell into the fantastic category. Many valuable suggestions have been accepted from citizens eager to do their share toward Victory, and some are now helping batter the Japs and Germans from the seas.

Miss Donna Lou Kosht was taken in as a new member. Names were drawn for the Christmas meeting and plans made for caroling. The meeting will be held at the parsonage in Sebring.

Dr. L. E. Lindover, Bob Powell, and Ed Steiner of Ashland college were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Powell.

Thirteen attended the home demonstration meeting at home of Mrs. A. R. Hoskins. Mrs. Clyde Stackhouse was in charge. Mrs. Stackhouse gave points on baking and Mrs. Ralph Wang points on sewing.

Mrs. Lee Galbreath gave a surprise party for her son, Bruce, Thursday night. There were 12 guests. Lunch was served and gifts were presented.

The P. T. A. held its meeting at Lake Placentia Friday. Mrs. Paul Wang was in charge, with Mrs. Louise Galbreath as secretary. The meeting was in charge of North Georgetown Stitchers and North Georgetown Champions 4-H clubs.

Slammin' Sammy Snead Heading Field In Portland Open

COMEBACK MAN TWO UNDER PAR

Pacing Such Red Hot Linksmen As Nelson And McSpaden

BY RUSS NEWLAND

PORLAND, Ore., Nov. 24.—Colorful Sam Snead, on the comeback trail of big time golf after 26 months service in the Navy, headed the field today as a crack contingent of pros and amateurs teed off in the second round of the 72-hole Portland open.

The Hot Springs, Va., power-house thrilled a gallery of more than 2500 when he clubbed over the rain-soaked Portland golf club course with a two-under par 70.

It was brilliant golf, conditions considered and the fact the one-time P. G. A. champion moved into major competition practically "cold." He was matching shots with the red hot stars of the day, Byron Nelson and Harold McSpaden, leading money winners for the year, and Bob Hamilton, holder of the National P. G. A. crown.

Whether Slammin' Sam can hold up the pace on such short notice for the balance of the tournament is another question.

Snead carded six pars in a row, then bagged two birdies to post a neat 33 for the outgoing nine. He had a bogey and birdie on the back nine, the rest pars. The soggy course played slow, no run to the shots. Even so, Sam whaled a drive and No. 3 wood to overshoot the 522-yard 18th. His chip back was weak, giving him a par where a birdie was in order.

Snead's initial effort gave him a one-stroke edge over Mike Turnesa, White Plains, N. Y., who finished with a 71.

Harold West, Portland pro turned bus driver, started his second round in third position with a par 72 already to his credit. He shared the spot with Willie Goggin, White Plains, N. Y., and Zell Eaton, Los Angeles.

Nelson, former National Open and P. G. A. champion, biggest money winner of the year, had a first round 73. He tied with Denny Shute, Akron, O., veteran who once held the British Open title and twice led the National P. G. A. tournament. Others in the same bracket included Charles Congdon, Tacoma, Wash.; Harry Bassler, Culver City, Calif.; Ted Longworth, Portland, and Gordon Richards, Seattle.

Present P. G. A. titlist of Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., and Harold McSpaden, Philadelphia crack-shot, started off today each with a 75 behind them. Twice former National Open Kingpin Ralph Guldahl of San Diego and present Open Champ Craig Wood of Mar-a-rocque, N. Y., virtually bowed out of the money scramble with first rounds of 79 and 80 respectively.

Wind, rain and darkness prevented women entrants from playing more than nine holes. Betty Hicks of Log Beach, Calif., Women's amateur champion who has turned pro, led the field at the turn with a fine 39.
